San Diego CORE's decision to picket the San Diego Gas and Electric Company after the issuance of a Superior Court restraining order against such picketing was based on contempt for SDG&e company, not the Superior Court order. There is, however, a danger that San Diego's citizens will misunderstand the motivation behind CORE's action of last Tuesday. Rather than risk a misunderstanding that would be damaging to the fight for human rights, CORE has decided to postpone further picketing of the gas and electric company until CORE's court appearance on Thursday, January 2.
